Since 2021 I have been in the Head of Design role at Casablanca, overseeing both menswear and womenswear, across all categories. In this role, my responsibility spans the creative process from concept to final show. I work very closely with the creative director: we carry out research in close cooperation and jointly develop the overriding ideas and concepts for each season. I am then responsible for providing steer and day-to day management of the design team in the execution of this creative vision. My role also involves close interaction with merchandisers and the buying teams, optimizing the range from a commercial point of view. Moreover, I have the overall responsibility for ensuring seamless coordination with the fabric, print, and embroideries teams.
