About

A student at City, University of London majoring in media, communication, and sociology. I worked for a catering company for four months while studying for my foundation year online and volunteered with a nonprofit charity organization. I work effectively under pressure, have exceptional organizational and interpersonal skills, and am determined to pursue a career in media production. With my expertise in the full Microsoft Office package, my capacity to continue learning, and my growth and devotion to the media platform, I could provide value to any media team.
